These are examples of how to cite the most common types of materials. If an author is not given, start with the title on that item! For more details, look at the latest edition of The Chicago Manual of Style (LB 2369 .C35 2003).

Books

Book with author
Author, Book Title. Place: Publisher, Year.

Book with editor(s)

Signed chapter or article from a book

Articles

Magazine article

Article in refereed journal

Newspaper article
Internet or World Wide Web page

Chicago Style—Citing a source within your essay

1. The Chicago Style is used by many writers in history, literature and the arts. Usually information about sources is given in footnotes or endnotes, plus a bibliography. For details look at the Chicago Manual of Style, section 16.8, or try www.wisc.edu/writing/Handbook/DocChicago.html

2. You can also cite sources in the text of your paper using either of these Chicago author-date models:

   Before the Supreme Court decided the Miranda case in 1966, forced confessions of criminal suspects, most often in the hands of police acting unprofessionally, were common in many parts of the U.S. (Stuart 2004), though …

   [or…]
   As Stuart (2004) reports, some recent court cases involving new police interrogation techniques designed to avoid …